Despite opposition, the two countries are expected to ratify the agreements. The decision is being backed by Germany's head of state, Frank-Walter Steinmeier, who has also stated that he will build a nuclear plant in his own house, according to his own account, as the French nuclear plant leader, Alain Auffray, has said that the heads of state have promised to build in nuclear power. The German government is already in negotiations with nuclear power companies and the German economy ministry says that it will support and fund the construction of any of the current plans, according to German daily, Deutsche Welle. Tractebel, a European pipeline company which is building ten gas and two electricity plants will be the main beneficiary from the project with 85% of the money from the nuclear power plants going to the company.Q: Streaming data from R to python using pycassa and riak I have a python program for data analysis which runs on the cloud and takes data from other program running in R. I want to write data to riak so that it can be accessed from the R program. I am new to Riak, but currently using pycassa. I can write data to Riak and can run small python programs that simply output a string to print it to screen, however, I don't know how to make pycassa write data to riak. I don't have my python program defined in pycassa yet, but I will like to know if it is possible to write data to Riak directly from R using a pycassa object? Thanks in advance. A: The short answer is no - you will need to call CASSANDRA_INIT() before you can write to Riak using the PyCassa library, and you will need to retrieve the Cassandra CQL object and write directly to it if you are trying to write back to the store from R. The example code here should show
